The agony of "Lady Lil" held the stage of Niblo's Garden last night, and the sinned against and sinning heroine had admirable scope for work amid the susceptible patrons of this house. So much has been said about "Lady Lil" in these columns that furtuer notice seems almost unascessary. The piece has very many good points. Miss Lillian Lewis worked very conscientiously, and was, at times, successful.

PROPLE'S TREATHE. "My Jack" was the play at the People's Theatre last night. It is a somewhat gruesome melodrama, in which a heroic helr, a trusting heroice and some missing documents have plenty to do. The situations, watch are loud, are, however, not without dramatic value, and the sudience at the People's gave them due reci gnition. Virtue triumphed and vice collapsed at the proper time. There was a good cast and capital acenery.

"The Struggle of Life" was the play-at the Grand Opera-house last night, and its lurid situations met with lavor. The scene where the hers was rescuted from the sewer was duty appreciated by the wailers gods. That hero was William Stafford, who didn't seem to mind his persecution. Others in the cast were Lloyd Meiville, Edward J. Heron, Royce Alton, Amelia Bingham, Louise Crollins, Molile Revel and C. J. Vincent.

"There are few better melodramas than "Good Old Times" now before the public. The play, which is from the pens of Hall Caine and Wilson Barrett, was acted at H. R. Jacoba Theatre last high: It was presented a few seasons ago at the Pourteenth Street Theatre, where it deservedly met with much success. There are several very picturesque scenes, and the plot, though conventional, is strong. H. M. Fitt played the leading role.
